In other times it might be said that those barreis and boxes are awaiting the garbige wagon which comes in this neighborhood once in a week, but in a time like this they look much more like preparations for a reception of a distinguished guest.

If, after paying the saiaries to our health officers, there is not money anough in the city treasury to buy garbage wagons and horses, I think that no resonable citizen would object to be taxed a little more and have his garbage taken away every day, especially in a time like this.
